My Honeybunch:—

Do you know I rec'd a letter from a loving but worried husband this morning, so I thought the very best thing to do was to answer immediately and tell this worried, loving husband that everything is alright and that I am quite myself again. Mama, too, is feeling better and that is some load off my

I was quite sorry that I didn't give you the check for your mother last night. After you had gone it bothered me greatly. If mother needed any money I could have drawn it out of the Savings Bank and in the meanwhile your mother could have made use of it. I am sure I don't know why I acted so thoughtlessly, but will positively ~~give~~ the check, inclosed, to-morrow night. Hope I didn't inconvenience your mother mind. I have only a little cold in my head but other wise feel fine. Will rest my head to-night, and I'll feel as good as new.

But tell me, do you feel alright? I certainly am sorry to have caused you all that worry and loss of sleep. Really, next time you mustn't do it. Did you get to bed early last night? Never mind, you just make up for it to-night.

When I read about your contributing 60¢ per week towards my carfare I couldn't help smiling. Never mind you honey sweet husband I saved 10¢ for you this morning because I rode via chambers St this morning and didn't have to pay any fare. No you will never guess why! Because I had my ~~[illegible]~~ black brassier from yesterday.

Will see you to-morrow night and until then here is a big kiss and squeeze.

Lovingly
Your little wife.
